TRUCK and FIELD CROPS. quires air as well as water, therefore, if you cannot get the one give the other. It is the same by irrigation or by excess of rain; after the land becomes saturated it needs constant cultivation to give vitality. Plant life is much like human life, requiring the elements most necessary to produce growth and unless we aid the soil to give it elements conducive to growth, we get sickly plants and poor returns.

TREATS THE EARTH RIGHT.

Some may say that it is fertilizing that gives the growth. Yes, but under proper conditions only, and unless you make these conditions available all your fertilizers will be of no benefit. I am aware that many farmers have an idea that when the season is dry, soil should not be disturbed or it will dry out.

This is true with regard to deep plowing, but it is just the opposite with shallow cultivation. By constant cultivation of soil cropped or uncropped, a falling rain will penetrate readily and prevent the washing of the soil, to a great extent. This method of mulching by constant cultivation is, I believe, also on the principle of the Campbell system of dry farming, and is just as applicable to corn and cotton as to truck growing.

VALUE OF SEMI-ARID LANDS.

The fact is indisputable that it is only quite recently that we have discovered the value of the semi-arid lands. To develop these we need education to enable our farmers to cultivate these lands under improved methods. As to tools to be used for securing a dust mulch, these should be of five-tooth one-horse expansion cultivator as also the one-horse expansion harrow of fifteen teeth. Sweeps and shovel plows will not answer as well. Shallow cultivation is needed and in dry weather never expose or turn over new soil, but let the dirt or soil fall back with little exposure. Allow no weeds or grass to interfere with your growing, as they will rob the moisture from your plants.
